Dear Sir

above is a copy of Ingleby's Bill which shall be sent with its receipt as soon as I can get a frank. I hope you will approve it; but I do not think it unreasonable as he assures me he had two months hard work. copies of any other drawings of mine will be freely at y^r [your] service. Please to pay the 8 guineas ^on my account into Mess^{rs} Gosling's hands; & favor me with their receipt at any time. I rejoice at y^r [your] freedom from y^r [your] parliamentary labors.² hard indeed is the service of an honest man in these days when so much is to reprehended on each side. The critical situation we are in gives me many an anxious moment.³ I heartily wish you a good journey to Bath: on y^r [your] return I shall make free to trouble you with inspecting the binding of four books as you so kindly offer. Perhaps by that time there may be some news of the remainder of the letter press of the swiss views.⁴

I am, Dear Sir,

Y^r [Your] obliged & faithful H. Serv^t [Humble Servant]

Tho. [Thomas] Pennant
Downing Sept^r [September] 12th. 1780.

Editorial Notes

¹ This list may be in Ingleby's hand. Ingleby copied the works named in the list from drawings previously completed by Moses Griffith, as seen in Pennant's extra-illustrated versions of his A tour in Wales. See 1007. For further drawings by Ingleby of views in Wales, Cheshire and Shropshire see National Library of Wales, 'John Ingleby Watercolours'.

³ Britain was at war with the Americans, whose numbers were boosted in July 1780 by the arrival of a contingent of French soldiers.
